

pharmatech™
associates

Coronavirus Update: Pharmatech Associates resumes onsite support.

We hope that you are staying healthy and safe during this challenging time. As the COVID-19 response enters the phase where safety preparedness systems are in place and business environments are beginning to resume their full engagements, Pharmatech has prepared our staff to safely resume and engage in on-site client support. As a result of our active engagement during the Shelter-In-Place requirements, our client projects have maintained their strategic focus and expected performance. We continue to be in service to the global life science community and stand ready with the necessary skills and expertise to assist with current project needs or augment your current team.

Safety is a priority. The act of returning to on-site engagements requires additional COVID-19 related consideration's as we work diligently to ensure our employees and our clients remain safe.

Monitoring authorities. We are following the guidance and aligning our procedures with the World Health Organization and relevant local, regional, and state rules and guidelines. We have and will continue to authorize only required travel and enhance our office systems allowing for our office staff to work remotely until such time as it is safe to reopen our offices.

Proactive communication. Our executive management continues to meet weekly to review current safety guidelines released by the authorities and to discuss each client engagement. These meetings ensure that our team is fully informed on the progress and is responsive to any impediments that have been encountered. Any situations that might threaten the expected progress of a project will be communicated directly as we act with purpose, and any resource necessary, to prevent or eliminate these situations.

Joining the global response to COVID-19. Pharmatech is actively engaged in providing support for new and promising tests and treatments in response to the COVID-19 pandemic.

We are committed to working together to maintain our close personal relationships during this time of social distancing while providing a high level of expertise and support. We remain vigilant, committed, and are here for you.

Warren Baker
Chairman & CEO